April 10th, 1:39pm. I'm at home pacing around my apartment after holding my mom's hand and encouraging her to fight as only she knows how for two weeks and a day. This was the only day I didn't get to see her simple and kind smile. I was unaware of what was happening. All I could do is hope that my brother Daryll would hurry cause I felt so helpless. Somewhere between 1 and 2 o'clock while I was pacing the floor with my bible open on the table I wrote on my kitchen calender, "I just lost my best friend". Then I walked over to my bedroom calender and wrote, "I heart U mom." "Tell my mom I'm leaving Florida never to look back. Where ever I end up I will be praying for Jesus to come back soon because every day I spend without her is more than I can bare. Only you could ever encourage me cause only you really knew my heart. Now, my spirit is broken. Truly broken. I will never stop believing there is a caring God and I only hope her will give me the chance to bring your spirit out of me again with whom ever I meet along the way. I will always know you did your best to fight for yourself but even more for me. Thank you mom for helping me along the way through all my trials. Me, a hopeless human being. I will keep your strong voice forever in my mind with every tear I shed. "I Love you Mom." I know, "You love me more." Your beloved

April is evil. April is not kind. It destroyed my heart and ravished my mind. Everywhere I walk. All who look at me. Look at me as if I don't belong. They look at me in disgust. I have no one left to trust. I watched my mother and held her hand as she looked at me with merciful eyes because this place that I trusted was afraid to take a risk in trying to save her. Their conscience is clear by letting her die this way. My mother is gone because she was too simple and kind. I listened to what my doctors tell me she wrote. How can someone let someone die when that someone doesn't understand why? When I was really sick my mom told me only you will ever know what you are going through. As I held her hand and watched the life of joy she taught me each and every day be taken from her I wished I could know.

We found a note in my mom's room with instructions on where she wanted her ashes. She wrote how much she loved her children and her husband and that she knew she had a good life. In the note with the instructions she wrote "bring a shovel with you"! Yeah, that's my mom!
